DESCRIPTION

The course aims to provide an immersion in issues related to persons deprived of liberty from the perspective of international human rights law, public health, criminal law, and practice. More broadly, the Summer School ‘Human Rights and Persons Deprived of Liberty’ aims to prepare participants to understand structural problems around prisons and contribute to the improvement of the human rights of persons deprived of liberty in their homeland and around the world. The summer course gives participants the opportunity to interact with world-renowned scholars and experts in the field.

The course is intended for persons interested in issues around prisons, such as master students, LL.M students, PhD students, and postdoctoral researchers with a background in law, political science, public health, or criminology, as well as staff of civil society organisations and policymakers.

Upon completion of the summer course, participants will have acquired:

- Knowledge about international standards for the protection of the human rights of persons deprived of liberty;
- Knowledge about the most important institutions and mechanisms for the protection and promotion of human rights at the global, regional and national levels;

- The ability to identify some legal, political and social strategies to safeguard the human rights of persons deprived of liberty;
- Knowledge of recommendations to bring about change and improvements.

The course is offered by the IMPACTUM team, the Programme for Studies on Human Rights in Context, the Human Rights Centre, Ghent University (Belgium), and the Global Campus on Human Rights (Austria). We are committed to the promotion of human rights. Our goal is to preserve the standards of quality education and to continue our mission of preparing students to meet the growing challenges to the rule of law, democracy and human rights around the world. Candidates who self-identify as belonging to vulnerable or minority groups are strongly encouraged to apply.

PROGRAMME

Each lecture will have a duration of 40 minutes and will be live-streamed via Zoom. After each lecture, there will be 10 minutes during which the participants can interact with each other and the lecturer on the given topic.
